Town of Hermosa, South Dakota

2024 Accomplishments

Severe rainstorms cause sudden flash floods in the Town of Hermosa, South Dakota (pop. 397). Battle Creek runs south of town with a secondary channel and floodplain extending through the southern portion of town. Old Dairy Drainage runs west to east across the northern extents of town. These waterways and the town's stormwater system flood during significant rain events, overtopping roads, and damaging infrastructure. In 2007, significant flooding washed out the railroad embankment and moved three homes off their foundations.

FloodWise Community since July 2023

Project services paid by FloodWise to date: $24,500

2024 FloodWise Deliverables

- Engaged stakeholders regarding community flood and drainage resiliency. This included facilitation of stakeholder flood mitigation meetings.
- Assisted the town in its successful pursuit of FEMA direct technical assistance (DTA).
- Participated in a two-day site visit in November to clarify community needs and goals. The meeting was attended by FEMA DTA staff, the South Dakota state emergency manager, the Custer County emergency manager, and Hermosa staff, board members, engineer, floodplain administrator, and residents.
- Received notification that Hermosa's $458,850 grant proposal to FEMA's BRIC program was funded. FloodWise staff helped the town prepare its grant proposal.

Community Engagement

FEMA Region 8 DTA staff conducted monthly stakeholder meetings to discuss the town's hazard resilience needs July through December 2024. Also in November, FEMA Region 8 DTA staff facilitated a two-day site visit with key stakeholders including Hermosa staff, board members, town engineer, floodplain administrator, and residents; the South Dakota state emergency manager; the Custer County emergency manager; and Headwaters Economics staff. The team identified key goals for community hazard resilience and laid out a plan for implementation.

FEMA BRIC Grant and DTA

In July, the Town of Hermosa was notified that its FEMA-Building Resilient Infrastructure and Communities (BRIC) grant proposal of $458,850 was selected for funding. The grant will fund the completion of a scoping project to prioritize drainage and flood mitigation projects, conduct feasibility and benefit-cost analyses, and design engineered solutions. This work builds on the drainage assessment and improvement plan conducted by Claycomb Engineering in 2023.

In July, the Town of Hermosa was also notified that they were selected to receive FEMA-BRIC Direct Technical Assistance (DTA). Through the DTA program and support from FEMA R8, FEMA consultants, and FloodWise, the town continues toward better preparedness for future hazards. The DTA team’s specific goals and support include:

- Supporting the town’s project management and grants management needs;
- Evaluating infrastructure and supporting residential geocoding;
- Evaluating the town’s codes, ordinances, and systems to reduce hazard risk for new construction;
- Enhancing community awareness of flood risk;
- Identifying solutions for the Ferguson Subdivision flood issues;
- Developing additional grant applications, as needed.

Next Steps

- Create and circulate a Request for Proposals for services to implement the scope of work funded by the FEMA BRIC grant.
- Assist with hiring an engineering firm to perform the work and begin project implementation.
- Apply for funding for generator power back-up for critical town infrastructure.
- Continue stakeholder meetings and community engagement.
- Continue progressing toward the town’s hazard resilience goals identified through FEMA DTA support.

Mental Health Minute Susan Lorenzen

My husband and I have just returned from a serene hike in TeePee Creek Gulch. This forest service road, my first hike in 1984, when I considered moving to the Black Hills, has always held a special place in my heart. It is one of the few hikes I consider my sanctuary for 'soul crafting.' When I need to be outdoors and introspect, to reflect, pray, go inward, and let my mind wander, this road off South Rockerville Road is one of the trails where I practice walking meditation. I sense the pleasure of God in the movement of my body and the rhythm of my breath.

I have long believed in and done contemplative practices, which calm the mind and sweep away noisy thoughts caused by obstacles in ordinary daily life. Meditation, contemplative prayer, mindfulness meditation, and sitting in stillness have in common a breathing practice that reinforces the benefits of getting quiet with the Divine and yourself.

My four-and-a-half-month experience without a left hip taught me profound gratitude for the ability to walk and hike with my new hip. Lately, my body has needed more movement, such as hiking on trails and walking our gravel roads, for pain management. Deep breathing has long been a pain management tool itself. My awareness that intentional, controlled breathing and walking go hand in hand prompted this Mental Health Minute. The pain melts when I walk for 30 minutes and breathe rhythmically. I am thankful I can walk and am pleased to be lucky enough to enjoy it physically, spiritually, and mentally. Reflecting on all of this, I found voluminous scientific research on the mental health benefits of breathwork.

The scientific literature on deep breathing concurs that there are four key mental health benefits:

- Reduces Anxiety and Stress: It lowers cortisol levels and promotes relaxation.
- Improves Focus and Clarity: Enhances oxygen flow to the brain, boosting cognitive function.
- Enhances Emotional Regulation: Helps individuals stay grounded and respond calmly to stressful situations.

- Promotes Better Sleep: It relaxes the nervous system, making it easier to fall asleep.

Purposeful breathing is a simple practice that is always accessible. It has mental health benefits, whether part of a sitting practice or movement to manage pain. For me, walking, stretching, strength training, and breathwork benefit my mental and physical health. Rhythmic breathing and movement belong together, in my opinion.

For calming yourself during stressful situations or in sitting practices like mindfulness meditation and contemplative prayer, here are a couple breathing patterns you can try to begin your quiet time:

The 4-7-8 method: Inhale deeply through your nose for 4 seconds, hold for 7 seconds, and exhale slowly through your mouth for 8 seconds. Repeat for 4–5 cycles to experience immediate calm. Notice and stay with that feeling of calm for at least 20 seconds, longer if possible.

Five-finger breathing: Open one hand and place your pointer finger at the outside base of your little finger. As you inhale slowly, trace your little finger to the tip of your finger. As you exhale, trace down the inside of your little finger to the crease between the little and ring fingers. Follow this same pattern of inhaling up the next finger and exhaling down. When you get to the outside of the thumb, use the same pattern on all fingers, returning to the base of the outside of the little finger.

For breathwork while walking, focus on inhaling and exhaling in an even rhythm that is comfortable for you. It helps to say right foot and left foot to match your inhale and exhale. This helps to keep unwanted thoughts from clouding your mind. Start with a slower pace to get your steps and breathing pattern synchronized. I recommend doing this for at least 20 minutes.

So, take a Mental Health Minute, or better yet, make that at least five minutes, and get some air!

Hermosa Museum.

We have been busy the past year at the museum getting the main floor all done and we are getting close.

A couple of years ago we managed to get a new furnace with air conditioner installed. And since then we have done the west side floor (sanded and waxed), new stairs going upstairs and closed off at the top end so we can keep the heat on the main floor, closed off some of the crawl space under the main part of the building so now we can keep the water on all year long without worrying about it freezing, the interior walls are all done with tongue and groove siding, the chimney was sand blasted back to original.

We have done Memorial bricks in front, We have plans to put in a flower garden along the west of the building and cover the bottom of the stucco with some cedar to cover the black tape to make it look more finished.

We are planning on being open week days during the summer so if you have not been in to see the new look it would be worth the trip to see how the old School House has been transformed into a museum to help preserve the past for everybody.

We are going to try to have some kind of an event every month and the one for June 7 is a Branding party at the Museum with a meal being served. If you do not have a brand on the wall in the museum PLEASE let us know and we will get one from you at the branding party. We have a board you just need to bring your branding iron.

All this has been done as the money was available either by Donations or grants and donated Labor. If you would like more information on being a Member or making a donation to help keep the museum going you can contact any member of the museum or come to a meeting held on the second Monday of the month or check us out on the Web site at hermosahistory.org.

We would like to THANK EVERYONE that has helped in any way in the past and hope it continues in the future.

Manes and Mindset Coaching

Hi, I'm Julie! My journey to becoming a certified life coach has been a lifelong exploration of the human and animal mind. My psychology studies in college ignited this passion, which I further developed during my impactful five and a half years as a counselor at Nexus Academy, a treatment center for youth. There, I honed my skills in de-escalation, teaching essential coping mechanisms, and navigating a wide spectrum of emotional experiences, earning me the recognition of a mental health practitioner. I am deeply passionate about helping you unlock your true potential so you can live fearlessly!

My other great love, horses, led me to establish a horseback riding business nestled in the stunning Black Hills of South Dakota. Through years of training horses, often those with difficult pasts, I discovered their incredible ability to ground us in the present and teach us about trust and connection. Their intuitive nature and strong survival instincts offer powerful parallels to our own lives. These equine lessons deeply influence my holistic 1-on-1 coaching approach, which I offer both virtually and in person to create a truly personalized experience. I also offer sessions utilizing the incredible healing power of horses (individual or groups up to 6) through equine assisted learning to deepen your emotional awareness and foster profound connections.

AWAKEN Method, and Trauma Recovery Facilitator, I'm dedicated to helping you break free from the grip of addictions, anxieties, fears, past hurts, and limiting beliefs. Together, we'll uncover the skills you need to move forward with confidence, create lasting positive change, and believe in your inherent ability to live your best life, starting now!

BITS & PIECES:

Communication Problem

A farmer went to the attorney's office and said he wanted to get a divorce. The attorney asked if he had any grounds.

"Yeah, I got about 240 acres," the farmer said. The attorney replied,

"But, I mean do you have a case?"
"No, I have a John Deere."

"Well, do you have a grudge?"
The farmer said, "Yea, I got a grudge. That's where I park my John Deere."

"No, I mean do you have a suit?"

"Yes, sir, I got a suit. I wear it to church on Sundays."

Next, the exasperated lawyer asked,
"Well, sir, does your wife beat you up or anything?"

"No, we both get up about 4:30."

The attorney finally asked, "OK, so why do you want a divorce?"

"Well," said the farmer, "I can't have a meaningful conversation with her!"

About real estate, probate and your heirs

Here's what a will can and can't do
About 68 percent of Americans don't have a will. If you are one of them, you could be leaving a tangled legal hassle to your family.

Wills affect only probate property, which is whatever you individually own.

A house owned by spouses is not probate property. If you and your wife own a home together, when one of you dies, the house passes directly to the other.

If you share ownership of investment property with an uncle or a couple of cousins, you need to have a will in order to designate who gets your share.

One advantage of probate is that it allows a certain amount of time for creditors to come forward. Then there is a cutoff. Any other claims are barred.

Note that there are a number of things a will won't do. Life insurance goes to the person named as the beneficiary. Saying in your will that someone else gets it has no effect. Bank accounts and certificates of deposit can have a pay-on-death designation. A will can't change that POD designation.

A will probably won't let you avoid probate entirely. It's a state court procedure that oversees the administration of your probate property. In most states, the process is not difficult and not very expensive. There are exceptions, such as California and Florida, where probate costs more.

The more complex the family is, including children of various marriages, adopted children and children with special needs, the more important it is to have an estate-planning lawyer draft a will and possibly a trust.

If your real estate is in more than one state, it's wise to create a trust so the estate won't have to be probated in each state. When funded with properly titled assets, a trust can also provides for beneficiaries with special needs and could help minimize any estate taxes.

A trust is not as expensive to set up as people think it is. It can cost from just $400 to $4,000, depending on how complicated the property issues are.

Quirky Easter traditions endure

Easter traditions can get pretty quirky depending on where you are in the world.

In parts of Scandinavia, like Sweden and Finland, kids dress up as witches—complete with broomsticks and painted faces—going door-to-door trading drawings for candy. It's like Halloween crashed into Easter, tied to old folklore about witches flying off to dance with the devil on Maundy Thursday.

Then there's Poland with its "Wet Monday," where people douse each other with water—buckets, squirt guns, whatever's handy. It's got roots in pagan spring rituals and a bit of Christian symbolism about cleansing, but mostly it's a free-for-all splash fest. Guys used to chase girls with water, and girls would retaliate with willow switches the next day, though now it's equal-opportunity soaking. In Greece, the island of Corfu has a wild one: on Holy Saturday morning, people chuck clay pots out their windows onto the streets below. It's a chaotic symphony of smashing pottery, supposedly to ward off evil spirits or mark renewal—plus, it's just satisfying to hurl stuff.

In the Czech Republic and Slovakia, there's a tradition where men lightly "whip" women with handmade willow switches on Easter Monday. It's meant to bring health and vitality, and the women often give out painted eggs or a shot of booze in return. It's playful, but it's definitely not your standard egg hunt.

And if you're in Bermuda, Good Friday means flying kites—bright, handmade ones buzzing in the sky. Legend ties it to a teacher explaining Jesus' ascension to kids with a kite, but it's also just a gorgeous way to kick off the weekend.

Tech buyer's guide:

Laptops that won't break the bank

Are you in the market for a budget laptop? Arm yourself with a little information before you pull out your credit card so you can make the most of your money and find a quality device to suit your needs.

Acer Aspire 3 (A314-23P-R3QA). This basic windows laptop, available for about $435 on Amazon, is lightweight and compact enough to fit in smaller computer bags, with enough battery life to get through the day without charging. And unlike many other budget Windows laptops, the processor is powerful enough to run multiple apps and keep up with the vast majority of everyday computing tasks.

Lenovo IdeaPad Flex 5i Chromebook Plus. This Chromebook boasts a touchscreen and a surprisingly nimble processor that allows users to sail through regular tasks with ease. It can also last through a full day of work or class on a single charge. About $500 at Best Buy.

Acer Nitro V 15. Gamers on a tight budget should take a look at the Acer Nitro V 15, which starts at around $700 on Amazon. While it doesn't include many of the bells and whistles you might find on more expensive laptops, it still offers sufficient processing power for a smooth gaming experience, ample battery life, and plenty of USB ports.

MacBook Air M1. It isn't Apple's most advanced laptop, but users will still appreciate this stylish and versatile laptop that will provide years of use. It's also a great choice for students, with a durable build and compact design that slides easily into backpacks. Available at WalMart for about $699.

Will AI lose the copyright war after all?

Do tech companies need to seek permission before they train an AI model with copyrighted data? Yes, ruled one federal judge in February, concluding a copyright infringement lawsuit that may define the many legal battles to come. Information and software company Thomson-Reuters filed the lawsuit in 2020, alleging that the legal startup Ross Intelligence violated copyright when it trained its AI model with editorial content from Westlaw, a Thomson-Reuters-owned legal search engine.

According to the Verge, Ross's defense -- that permission was not required because their activities should be considered fair use -- fell flat with Judge Stephanos Bibas. In his occasionally scathing opinion, he agreed with Thomson-Reuters' claim that Ross used copyrighted data to build a direct competitor to the Westlaw service, and noted that "none of Ross's possible defenses hold water."

The ruling could potentially influence the outcomes of dozens of AI-related copyright infringement cases currently winding their way through courthouses, including a recently filed lawsuit brought by five major media companies against the startup Cohere. According to Betakit, the lawsuit alleges "massive, systemic copyright infringement" and accuses Cohere of using their copyrighted content to train its AI models and generate falsely attributed fake articles.

It's just one battle in what is likely to be a long and arduous war. But so far, copyright holders seem to hold a slight advantage.

Pros and cons of pharmacy delivery for seniors

Why go out for something when you can just get it delivered? After all, your knee hurts and the weather's nasty.

When you sign up to receive your prescriptions by mail, it's important to understand all the pros and cons and the real cost of all that convenience.

Medication delivery, especially mail order prescription services, have become increasingly convenient. Since many mail order pharmacies are jointly owned and managed by pharmacy benefit managers and health insurance companies, the associated co-pays may be lower compared to what you pay at a regular retail pharmacy. Mail order pharmacies also commonly fill prescriptions for 90 days, which can also reduce your copay.

But some of these benefits come with their own potential downsides. For one, most mail order pharmacies rely on the U.S. Postal Service as their primary shipping partner. But according to Government Executive, mail delivery has slowed. For customers in rural areas, those shipping delays might leave them scrambling for alternative options when essential medications fail to arrive on time.

Some patients may also benefit from the personalized attention they receive at local retail pharmacies. According to GoodRx, your local pharmacy may be able to provide a 90-day supply at a similar price as a mail order pharmacy. If you're happy with your current pharmacy and have a good relationship with the staff, you don't necessarily need to make the switch.

There are ways to make it easier to manage prescriptions.

- * Try to group mail order prescriptions together.

- * Review your health plan. This will help you understand which medications are preferred and when a local pharmacy might be cheaper than mail order.

- * Use your pharmacy's mobile app to fill and track deliveries from your phone.

- * Plan to rely on a local pharmacy for acute care needs, like antibiotics.

- * Make a note to refill mail order prescriptions about two weeks before you need them.

Easter Memories

Cathy Dahl

I've been spending a lot of time lately thinking about the past, and I've realized how much church has played a part in my life. With Easter coming, my thoughts go back to all the little Easter dresses my mother sewed for me when I was growing up. This was back in the 50s and 60s and the dresses were made of dotted-swiss, lace, gingham, etc. I remember standing on the kitchen table so she could pin up the hems. Then, of course, there would be a new Easter bonnet and little white gloves. We'd go to Brooklyn Center Baptist Church in Minnesota for service and I'd sing in the children's choir. I still can sing, "up from the ground He arose, with a mighty triumph o'er His foes..." and recall how I and the kids near me would sing, "o'er His toes," and think it was just the funniest thing.

As time went by, I got married in that church and went on to have two children of my own. Following in my mother's footsteps, every Easter I would sew a new dress for my little daughter and made new outfits for my young son too (until he got old enough to say, "Nope! Not wearing that."). This was during the 70s and 80s when Little House on the Prairie was popular and I'd make what Nicole called "prairie hats" to go with her dresses. We'd go to service at First Lutheran Church in Milford, Iowa, then Messiah Lutheran, N. Mankato, Minnesota, and currently Our Savior's Lutheran in Hermosa.

No matter where we went to church, there was a feeling of family and belonging - fellowship after the service with wonderful caring people. I realize many will say there are hypocrites in church so they do not choose to attend. I am not saying that churches do not have imperfect people. None of us are perfect! But most of us are trying. Looking back on these memories, I remember so much good. So much kindness. So much caring. And the presence of God.

Do you have memories like these? Don't you want your children to have these memories?

When covid hit, staying home from church became a habit. And yes, online services are wonderful but there isn't quite the feeling of being there. Matthew 20 reads, "For where two or three gather in my name, there am I with them."

Please consider coming back to church and bring your whole family. The churches of Hermosa would be happy to see you!
